6 IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
7 FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

9 Curtis Bruns,
10 Plaintiff,
11 v.
12 Commissioner of Social Security
13 Administration,
14 Defendant.

No. CV-22-01819-PHX-DWL

ORDER

15 This is a Social Security appeal. On January 26, 2023, the Court referred the matter
16 to Magistrate Judge Metcalf for the preparation of a report and recommendation (“R&R”) 17 as to the final disposition. (Doc. 15.) On September 28, 2023, Judge Metcalf issued an 18 R&R concluding that the ALJ’s decision should be reversed and that the matter should be 19 remanded for further proceedings. (Doc. 33.) Afterward, Plaintiff filed timely objections 20 to the R&R, arguing that the proper remedy is a remand for calculation of benefits. (Doc.
21 34.) The Commissioner disagrees and urges the Court to adopt the R&R’s recommended 22 disposition. (Doc. 36.)

23 For the following reasons, Plaintiff’s objections are overruled, the R&R is adopted, 24 and this matter is remanded for further proceedings.

25 DISCUSSION

26 I. Legal Standard

27 Under 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B), a district judge may “designate a magistrate judge 28 to . . . submit to a judge of the court proposed findings of fact and recommendations for

1 the disposition" of a dispositive matter. Id.

2 "Within fourteen days after being served with a copy [of the R&R], any party may 3 serve and file written objections . . . as provided by rules of court. A judge of the court 4 shall make a de novo determination of those portions of the report or specified proposed 5 findings or recommendations to which objection is made. A judge of the court may accept, 6 reject, or modify, in whole or in part, the findings or recommendations made by the 7 magistrate judge. The judge may also receive further evidence or recommit the matter to 8 the magistrate judge with instructions." Id. § 636(b)(1). See also Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(2)- 9 (3) (same).

10 "In providing for a de novo determination . . . Congress intended to permit whatever 11 reliance a district judge, in the exercise of sound judicial discretion, chose to place on a 12 magistrate's proposed findings and recommendations. . . . [D]istrict courts conduct proper 13 de novo review where they state they have done so, even if the order fails to specifically 14 address a party's objections." United States v. Ramos, 65 F.4th 427, 433 (9th Cir. 2023) 15 (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). See also id. at 434 ("[T]he district court 16 ha[s] no obligation to provide individualized analysis of each objection.").

17 Additionally, district courts are not required to review any portion of an R&R to 18 which no specific objection has been made. See, e.g., Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 149-19 50 (1985) ("It does not appear that Congress intended to require district court review of a 20 magistrate's factual or legal conclusions, under a de novo or any other standard, when 21 neither party objects to those findings."); United States v. Reyna-Tapia, 328 F.3d 1114, 22 1121 (9th Cir. 2003) ("[T]he district judge must review the magistrate judge's findings and 23 recommendations de novo if objection is made, but not otherwise."). Thus, district judges 24 need not review an objection to an R&R that is general and non-specific. See, e.g., Warling
 25 v. Ryan, 2013 WL 5276367, *2 (D. Ariz. 2013) ("Because de novo review of an entire R
 26 & R would defeat the efficiencies intended by Congress, a general objection 'has the same 27 effect as would a failure to object.'") (citations omitted); Haley v. Stewart, 2006 WL 28 1980649, *2 (D. Ariz. 2006) ("[G]eneral objections to an R & R are tantamount to no

1 objection at all.”).

2 II. Relevant Background

3 In the underlying decision, the ALJ acknowledged that Plaintiff had the severe 4 impairments of “knee dysfunction, depression, post-traumatic stress disorder, and anxiety” 5 but concluded that Plaintiff was not disabled. (AR at 17-25.) In reaching this conclusion, 6 the ALJ declined to fully credit Plaintiff’s symptom testimony (id. at 19-20) and evaluated 7 the opinions of several medical sources (id. at 20-23). Two of those medical sources, Drs.
 8 Huggins and Ahmad, opined that Plaintiff had disabling mental limitations, but the ALJ 9 deemed those doctors’ opinions “not persuasive” in part. (Id. at 20-21.) In contrast, the 10 ALJ concluded that the opinion of a “State agency consultant,” Dr. Salk, who “stated 11 [Plaintiff] is able to perform one to two step tasks on a sustained basis,” was “consistent 12 and supported by the evidence.” (Id. at 22.)<sup>1</sup> Similarly, with respect to Dr. Dalton, the 13 state agency psychological consultant “[a]t the reconsideration level,” the ALJ deemed 14 “persuasive” Dr. Dalton’s opinion that Plaintiff “is able to remember basic workplace 15 locations and procedures and simple instructions.” (Id. at 23.)<sup>2</sup> Additionally, the ALJ 16 concluded that the opinions of Dr. Lovett, a consultative examiner, were “persuasive” and 17 further supported a finding of non-disability. (Id. at 22.)

18 In his opening brief, Plaintiff raises three assignments of error: (1) the ALJ erred by 19 concluding that the opinions of Dr. Lovett supported a finding of non-disability, because 20 “Dr. Lovett assessed limitations that would limit [Plaintiff’s] ability to sustain work 21 activity”; (2) the ALJ provided legally insufficient reasons for discrediting the opinions of 22 Drs. Huggins and Ahmad; and (3) the ALJ provided legally insufficient reasons for 23 discrediting Plaintiff’s symptom testimony. (Doc. 19.)

24 In the response brief, the Commissioner concedes error as to the ALJ’s challenged

---

25 <sup>1</sup> Although the ALJ’s decision does not identify Dr. Salk by name, Dr. Salk is 26 identified in the underlying records as the state agency psychological consultant who 27 opined that Plaintiff “is able to perform 1- to 2-step tasks on a sustained basis.” (AR at 28 67.)

<sup>2</sup> Although the ALJ’s decision does not identify Dr. Dalton by name, Dr. Dalton is 27 identified in the underlying records as the state agency psychological consultant at the 28 reconsideration level. (AR at 78-97.)

1 findings regarding Drs. Huggins and Ahmad and regarding Plaintiff's symptom testimony 2 but argues that a remand for further proceedings, rather than a remand for calculation of 3 benefits, is the appropriate remedy. (Doc. 27.) Among other things, the Commissioner 4 argues:

5 Plaintiff has also failed to show that the evidence, credited as true, would 6 require a finding that he was disabled. Even if the record is free of conflicts, 7 gaps, or ambiguities, the third prong of the credit-as-true rule is only satisfied 8 when it would be "clear from the administrative record that the ALJ would 9 be required to award benefits." Here, . . . there are questions about Dr.
10 Huggins' opinion based upon her psychological testing because state agency 11 consultant Dr. Salk thought Plaintiff's score on a validity test (PAI) 12 suggested that Plaintiff's profile might not be valid. In addition, the prior 13 administrative finding from Dr. Dalton, credited as true, does not establish 14 that Plaintiff was disabled. Dr. Dalton found Plaintiff could perform simple 15 and routine work with limits on interacting with others consistent with the 16 ALJ's RFC. In sum, "the record as a whole creates serious doubt as to 17 whether [Plaintiff] is, in fact, disabled within the meaning of the Social 18 Security Act." A remand for further proceedings is necessary to resolve these 19 outstanding issues.

20 (Id. at 8, citations omitted.)

21 In his reply brief, Plaintiff argued that a remand for calculation of benefits is the 22 appropriate remedy. (Doc. 26.) Among other things, Plaintiff notes that the answering 23 brief does "not dispute that the limitations assessed by Dr. Lovett would significantly 24 impact [Plaintiff's] ability to sustain even unskilled work" and thus argues that "[t]he 25 Commissioner has forfeited any arguments in defense of this legal error, which provides 26 another basis for this Court's consideration of exercise of its discretion to remand [this] 27 case without rehearing and for payment of disability benefits." (Id. at 3.) Plaintiff also 28 argues that "the ALJ did not rate the persuasiveness of Dr. Salk's opinion, so this record does not support placing any reliance or significance on Dr. Salk's comments about Dr.
Huggins's testing." (Id. at 6.) Finally, Plaintiff acknowledges the existence of a "conflict between the medical opinions" but argues this conflict does not require a remand for further proceedings because "the conflict . . . can be boiled down to this: the agency nonexamining

1 reviewers, who never laid eyes on [Plaintiff], but limited [Plaintiff] to simple work with 2 limited social interaction (which the ALJ either failed to rate the persuasiveness of, or 3 cherry-picked portions of the opinions to find persuasive) versus the opinions from three 4 different providers that all examined and/or treated [Plaintiff], agency examining 5 psychologist, Dr. Lovett, and treating mental providers, Drs. Ahmad and Huggins, who all 6 concluded that [Plaintiff's] mental impairments and symptoms would preclude his ability 7 to sustain even unskilled work.” (Id. at 8.)

8 In the R&R, Judge Metcalf agrees with the Commissioner that the appropriate 9 remedy is a remand for further proceedings. (Doc. 33.) Among other things, Judge Metcalf 10 concluded that further administrative proceedings would be “useful” to resolve unresolved 11 conflicts between Dr. Salk’s opinion and Dr. Huggins’s opinion and unresolved 12 “disparit[ies] between reported symptoms and Plaintiff’s testimony.” (Id. 4-7.)

13 III. The Parties’ Arguments

14 Plaintiff’s objections to the R&R (Doc. 34) largely mirror the arguments in his reply 15 brief. In a nutshell, Plaintiff argues that a remand for further proceedings would be 16 inappropriate because (1) “Dr. Salk’s comments on Dr. Huggins’s evaluation did not create 17 a factual conflict that must be resolved prior to applying the credit-as-true rule, as Dr.
 18 Huggins confirmed [Plaintiff] produced a valid profile that resulted in limitations from 19 mental symptoms and impairments that would preclude work . . . [and] Dr. Salk’s one-off 20 comments, which the ALJ did not even accept, credit, or adopt, did not provide substantial 21 evidence of non-disability” (id. at 4-5); (2) “[t]he fact that this record shows some waxing 22 and waning or even some improvement or stability in [Plaintiff’s] mental symptoms over 23 the course of treatment does not provide substantial evidence of a conflict that must be 24 resolved prior to crediting the improperly rejected evidence as true” (id. at 5-6); and (3) 25 “[t]he opinion from agency nonexamining reviewer Dr. Dalton did not provide substantial 26 evidence of a conflict that required resolution prior to remand for determination of 27 benefits” because “Dr. Dalton’s opinion, provided in April 2019, . . . did not, and could 28 not, take into account later records that showed [Plaintiff’s] ongoing and/or increased 1 symptoms that required further medication additions and adjustment" (id. at 6-7).

2 In response, the Commissioner argues that all three of these areas of conflict show
 3 why further proceedings would indeed be useful. (Doc. 36.)

4 IV. Analysis

5 Having conducted the required de novo review, the Court agrees with Judge Metcalf 6 and the Commissioner that the proper remedy here is a remand for further proceedings.
 7 "The credit-as-true analysis has evolved in our circuit over time, thus providing a challenge 8 for application by the district court." Leon v. Berryhill, 880 F.3d 1041, 1044 (9th Cir.
 9 2017). As the Ninth Circuit has clarified in recent opinions, "[a]n automatic award of 10 benefits in a disability benefits case is a rare and prophylactic exception to the well-11 established ordinary remand rule." Id. See also Treichler v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec. Admin., 12 775 F.3d 1090, 1101 n.5 (9th Cir. 2014) ("[O]ur jurisprudence . . . requires remand for 13 further proceedings in all but the rarest cases.").

14 On the merits, "[t]he credit-as-true rule has three steps. First, we ask whether the 15 ALJ has failed to provide legally sufficient reasons for rejecting evidence, whether 16 claimant testimony or medical opinion. Second, we determine whether the record has been 17 fully developed, whether there are outstanding issues that must be resolved before a 18 determination of disability can be made, and whether further administrative proceedings 19 would be useful. And third, if no outstanding issues remain and further proceedings would 20 not be useful, only then do we have discretion to find the relevant testimony credible as a 21 matter of law. Even if all three steps are met, the decision whether to remand a case for 22 additional evidence or simply to award benefits is in our discretion." Washington v.
 23 Kijakazi, 72 F.4th 1029, 1041 (9th Cir. 2023) (cleaned up). A district court properly 24 exercises its discretion to remand for further proceedings where "there is serious doubt as 25 to whether [the claimant] is disabled." Leon, 880 F.3d at 1048. See also Brown-Hunter v.
 26 Colvin, 806 F.3d 487, 495 (9th Cir. 2015) ("[E]ven if all three requirements are met, we 27 retain flexibility in determining the appropriate remedy. We may remand on an open 28 record for further proceedings when the record as a whole creates serious doubt as to

1 whether the claimant is, in fact, disabled within the meaning of the Social Security Act.”) 2 (cleaned up).

3 The credit-as-true rule is inapplicable here. Although step one is satisfied in light 4 of the ALJ’s undisputed failure to provide legally sufficient reasons for discrediting certain 5 evidence, step two is not—further administrative proceedings would be useful for a variety 6 of reasons. Most important, there is a conflict between the opinions of Drs. Salk and 7 Dalton, on the one hand, and Drs. Huggins, Ahmad, and Lovett, on the other, that the ALJ
 8 must resolve in the first instance. Although Plaintiff has argued it is unnecessary to resolve 9 that conflict because Drs. Salk and Dalton are non-treating physicians whose opinions 10 could not possibly be as persuasive as the opinions of treating and examining physicians 11 such as Drs. Huggins, Ahmad, and Lovett (Doc. 26 at 8), this argument reflects a 12 misunderstanding of the how the new SSA regulations require ALJs to evaluate medical 13 opinion evidence. Woods v. Kijakazi, 32 F.4th 785, 787 (9th Cir. 2022) (“For claims 14 subject to the new regulations, the former hierarchy of medical opinions—in which we 15 assign presumptive weight based on the extent of the doctor’s relationship with the 16 claimant—no longer applies.”).<sup>3</sup> Nor is there any merit to Plaintiff’s contention that, 17 because the ALJ did not previously address Dr. Salk’s criticisms of Dr. Huggins’s 18 evaluation, it is unnecessary (and would be improper) to allow the ALJ to address that issue 19 on remand. (Doc. 34 at 4.) In fact, this is exactly the sort of circumstance where a remand 20 for further proceedings would be useful. Burrell v. Colvin, 775 F.3d 1133, 1141-42 (9th 21 Cir. 2014) (rejecting the claimant’s argument that “because the ALJ’s reasons for 22 discrediting her testimony and Dr. Riley’s assessment are legally insufficient, we have no 23 choice but to . . . remand for an award of benefits” and concluding that a remand for further 24 proceedings was the appropriate remedy because, even though “Claimant may be 25 disabled,” “evidence in this record not discussed by the ALJ” cast serious doubt on the 26 claim of disability). Finally, there is also no merit to Plaintiff’s contention that, due to the

---

27       <sup>3</sup> The new regulations apply to applications filed on or after March 27, 2017. Because 28 Plaintiff filed his application on August 17, 2018 (AR at 13), the new regulations are applicable here.

1 lapse in time between the issuance of Dr. Dalton's opinions and the development of other 2 evidence, it is unnecessary to allow the ALJ to address, in the first instance, the conflicts
 3 between Dr. Dalton's opinions and that other evidence. (Doc. 34 at 7 ["Dr. Dalton's
 4 opinion, provided in April 2019, did not provide substantial evidence of a conflict when it 5 did not, and could not, take into account later records that showed [Plaintiff's] ongoing 6 and/or increased symptoms that required further medication additions and adjustments, the 7 assessments from Drs. Huggins and Ahmad, and [Plaintiff's] symptom testimony, which 8 were consistent across the board."].) After all, "[t]here is always some time lapse between 9 a consultant's report and the ALJ hearing and decision, and the Social Security regulations 10 impose no limit on such a gap in time." Meadows v. Saul, 807 F. App'x 643, 647 (9th Cir.
 11 2020). Perhaps the ALJ will conclude, on remand, that the time lapse is a reason for 12 resolving the conflict in Plaintiff's favor, but that is a decision the ALJ must make in the 13 first instance. Id. ("[A]lthough the non-examining state agency physicians did not review 14 any evidence beyond August 2014, the ALJ did not err in giving great weight to the 15 physicians' opinions.").

16 Accordingly,

17 IT IS ORDERED that:

- 18 (1) Plaintiff's objections to the R&R (Doc. 34) are overruled.
- 19 (2) The R&R (Doc. 33) is adopted.
- 20 (3) The decision of the ALJ is reversed and this matter is remanded for further proceedings.
- 22 (4) The Clerk shall enter judgment accordingly and terminate this action.
